The newest addition to Leesburg's movie theater landscape is on its way to construction, following a ground-breaking ceremony of the future Cobb Theatres at the Village at Leesburg Monday.

The 12-screen movie theater will be built at the western end of the development, next to the currently under construction LA Fitness. The theater will be the first for Cobb Theatres in the Washington, DC, metro region, but joins the company's 194 other theaters scattered throughout the country, mainly in Florida.

In addition to the 12 theater screens, the Leesburg Cobb Theatres will also feature a upscale bar and grill element, known as the company's CineBistro feature. Certain theaters will be designated for those aged 21 and over to allow for alcohol service. The new Cobb Theatres is expected to be open by summer 2011.

In attendance for today's groundbreaking ceremony were Leesburg Mayor Kristen Umstattd, Councilman Ken Reid and Supervisor Kelly Burk (D-Leesburg).
